BACKGROUND

The first employee survey was conducted in the Fall of 2006 and results were reported on both a statewide and district basis. The design of the survey followed the format provided as part of the CourtTools resources created by the National Center for State Courts. The survey was re-administered in the same format each Fall from 2007-2009. Survey results were utilized to inform management of the work environment successes and challenges, as well as, to provide a point of reference for each successive year to measure whether modifications in management practices impacted survey results.

In 2011 the Employee Survey was redesigned specifically for the Utah Courts with the goal of measuring the factors which contribute to establishing a positive work environment which allows staff to be engaged and motivated to contribute to the mission of the Courts. The 2013 survey data provides us with a second set of data to use as a comparison point. In addition, by surveying staff every two years, management teams are provided an opportunity to initiate changes suggested by the survey data and ideally time for those changes to achieve fruition within the environment prior to the next survey.

The mission of the Utah Courts is to provide the people an open, fair, efficient, and independent system for the advancement of justice under the law.

The Survey was administered throughout the month of October and all staff were invited to participate by following a link to a third party website. All respondents were asked to identify their district, position, and length of tenure with the courts with all responses remaining confidential. In addition, each statement allowed respondents to provide any further written information in an open ended format. The results are reported on both a statewide and district basis with the flexibility to examine down to the position level. Table 1 details response rates.

THE VALUE OF THE EMPLOYEE SURVEY

The Employee Survey is designed to solicit input from staff at all levels in a variety of areas which can be identified as contributing factors to a productive and positive workplace. This includes: immediate supervisors, management in the district, work environment, and engagement factors. All responses are rated on a five point scale as follows: 1 - strongly disagree, 2 - disagree, 3 - neutral, 4 - agree, 5 - strongly agree. Responses with an average rating closer to 1.0 indicate there may be a concern in the particular area the statement is addressing. Conversely, responses with an average rating closer to 5.0 indicate more successful practices in a particular area. Statements rated closer to 3.0 suggest there are nearly an equal amount of both positive and negative perceptions in the workplace.

In every instance the value of the feedback found in the Employee Survey is determined by how an individual supervisor, district (or office) management team, and individual employee strive to make a positive contribution to the work environment. The goal in each area surveyed should be to have a series of 5.0 ratings for each statement. For example: if the response to the statement “communication with my supervisor is effective” is rated at 2.50, then individual supervisors in that particular district/office should reflect on their individual practices and ask “what am I doing to contribute either negatively or positively to the rating” and take the appropriate action.

FACTOR I - AN EMPLOYEE’S IMMEDIATE SUPERVISOR

A primary factor in an employees’ job satisfaction is their relationship with their immediate supervisor. In a 2011 nationwide survey conducted by the Society for Human Resource Management an employee’s relationship with their immediate supervisor was ranked by 55% of the respondents as being very important, trailing only job security (63%) and opportunities to use skills and abilities (62%).

FACTOR 2 - THE MANAGEMENT TEAM

In most district/offices the management team is responsible for overseeing operations and offices throughout the district/office. In our organization the management team establishes the tone for the entirety of the operation and are where supervisors and staff take the cues on organizational culture and expectations.

FACTOR 3 - THE WORK ENVIRONMENT

An office's work environment is influenced by the collection of individuals working within it and the expected standards established to govern interaction. Recent restructuring throughout the court system has created an increased reliance on a team oriented approach to accomplish the work of the court both inside and outside the courtroom. A high performing team should embrace the factors in this area while offices and districts should work to reinforce a team oriented culture. Employees' who enjoy a positive work environment are often more productive and engaged, and while setting the tone for the workplace is the task of management, maintaining the environment is the charge of every employee.

FACTOR 4 - ENGAGEMENT

While all the factors of the Employee Survey contribute to employee engagement the statements in this area are most directly related to an individual employees' sense of their own value within the organization. The more valued and empowered an employee feels in their work and career potential the greater their sense of engagement. From a management perspective the practice of the fundamental principles delivered in the Excellence in Management Series training will assist a supervisor in maximizing the potential for staff to be engaged.
